He says that when King Lebannen was to be crowned, last autumn, he sent to Gont for the Havnor Great Port; he owned the biggest chestnut groves; he owned the carts and hired the carters. They were not far inside the Grove, and still beside the stream, when Irian stopped, turned aside. "What we know is the doorway between them." It's a rare gift, to know where you need to be, before you've been to all the places you don't. "They didn't punish him, but kept his wild powers bound with spells until they could make him the King, and the Allking, and the Body of the Moon." His gaze, benevolent and inquisitive, passed. "She will when the time comes. But she has no part to play in your decision, Diamond. Women know. A shock-haired, bright-eyed woman with a candle bound to her forehead set down her pick to show. "Best come away," said the Master Windkey, his face set and sombre, his keen eyes troubled. He set cheeks. His calm, open smile showed small teeth, several of them missing. "Those who have learned accepted the lesson. No magic. Never again. He had never given his heart to it. It had been a game. The Summoner looked up at Irian. Slowly he raised his arms and the white staff in the invocation of a spell, speaking in the tongue that all the wizards and mages of Roke had learned, the language of their art, the Language of the Making: "Irian, by your name I summon you and bind you to obey me!". I paced the room. She followed me with her eyes, as if I were. . . as if she stood in a cage. She looked at him in the starlight, and said, "Tell me your name - not your true name - only what I can call you. When I think of you." "Don't be afraid," Gelluk said, his voice strong and musical over the panting gasp of the huge. Silence before. There was a very long pause. sorcery was not much greater than his pupil's, but he had clear in his mind the idea of something. To Otter this conversation was, again, like walking forward in a vast darkness with a small lamp. Anieb's understanding was that lamp. Each step revealed the next step he must take, but he could never see the place where he was. He did not know what was coming next, and did not understand what he saw. But he saw it, and went forward, word by word. He resolved to wait and watch. Being a patient man with a strong will, he did so for four years, till Diamond was sixteen. A big, well-grown youth, good at games and lessons, he was still ruddy-faced and bright-eyed and cheerful. He had taken it hard when his voice changed, the sweet treble going all untuned and hoarse. Golden had hoped that that was the end of his singing, but the boy went on wandering about with itinerant musicians, ballad-singers and such, learning all their trash. That was no life for a merchant's son who was to inherit and manage his father's properties and mills and business, and Golden told him so. "Singing time is over, son," he said. "You must think about being a man." Only a few steps ahead of them now was the place where underfoot, underground, two or three feet. directions, not illuminated by a single spark. And they study there just to get richer. Or to get power. holiest place was a cavern and standing stones in the desert of Atuan, called the Tombs. It was a. "Oh, pretty man," said one of them with a smile, "don't even show us what you have in your pack." "She's very sick, Rush," the girl said. She looked again at Tern. "You're not a healer?" It was an accusation. In the Archipelago, men built ships and women built houses, that was the custom; but in building a great structure women let men work with them, not having the miners' superstitions that kept men out of the mines, or the shipwrights' that forbade women to watch a keel laid. So both men and women of great power raised the Great House on Roke. Its cornerstone was set on a hilltop above Thwil Town, near the Grove and looking to the Knoll. Its walls were built not only of stone and wood, but founded deep on magic and made strong with spells. signs glowing in the air: LOCAL CIRCUITS. I came to an escalator that held quite a few people. When he was on Orrimy, Medra had learned to read the common writing of the Archipelago. Later, Highdrake of Pendor had taught him some of the runes of power. That was known lore. What Ember had learned alone in the Immanent Grove was not known to any but those with whom she shared her knowledge. She lived all summer under the eaves of the Grove, having no more than a box to keep the mice and wood rats from her small store of food, a shelter of branches, and a cook fire near a stream that came out of the woods to join the little river running down to the bay, Medra camped nearby. He did not know what Ember wanted of him; he hoped she meant to teach him, to begin to answer his questions about the Grove. But she said nothing, and he was shy and cautious, fearing to intrude on her solitude, which daunted him as did the strangeness of the Grove itself. The second day he was there, she told him to come with her and led him very far into the wood. They walked for hours in silence. In the summer midday the woods were silent. No bird sang. The leaves did not stir. The aisles of the trees were endlessly different and all the same. He did not know when they turned back, but he knew they had walked farther than the shores of Roke. "Hungry? Eat," he said. Licky took him down into the mines to show him the gangues, the kinds of earth the ore was likely. "I won't sail my boat across Havnor, dear love. I plan to go around it. By water." He could always make her laugh; he was the only one who could. When he was away, she was quiet-voiced and even-tempered, having learned the uselessness of impatience in the work that must be done. Sometimes she still scowled, sometimes she smiled, but she did not laugh. When she could, she went to the Grove alone, as she had always done. But in these years of the building of the House and the founding of the school, she could go there seldom, and even then she might take a couple of students to learn with her the ways through the forest and the patterns of the leaves; for she was the Patterner. speak to her." The girl went back in for a moment, and Rush said to Medra, "It's consumption her. over the antique descriptions of harikki and otak and icebear.
